Textbook Publishing

Your primary objective is to impart knowledge to students. You are a teacher eager to teach a specific course, but have discovered that too few textbooks exist on the subject. You work in an ever-changing industry that requires new or updated materials for students in any academic Institution. You're already publishing in academic journals and want to expand to a student audience.

Just because you're writing a textbook doesn't mean has to be boring. Mention real-life examples in your book proposal. Make easy for readers. Goal should be a wide variety of people, not just those studying the topic. We are interested in work that has a scholarly base but might still reach a larger audience.
